Writing Case, &c.

(Provisional Protection not allowed.)

PROVISIONAL SPECIFICATION left by Edward John Walford at the Office of the Commissioners of Patents on the 1st December 1877.

EDWARD JOHN WALFORD, of 19, York Terrace, Regent's Park, in the County of Middlesex, Gentleman. "A PORTABLE ADVERTISING WRITING CASE AND INK ABSORBER."

I construct a portable writing case in the form of a portefolio, and I insert or secure pieces of absorbent material therein, the said writing case being constructed either with or without pockets, and on the said portable writing case, and on the said pieces of absorbent material therein contained or secured, I print, impress, or stamp advertisements. Thus the said "portable advertising writing case and ink absorber" unites in itself a portable receptacle for writing paper and envelopes, a case whereon to place writing paper while in the act of writing, a means of absorbing or removing the surplus ink from the paper when written upon, and a valuable medium of advertising.

And I claim as my Invention, the arrangement and combination of the portable writing case and the absorbent material having advertisements thus printed, impressed, or stamped thereon, these together forming the said "portable advertising writing case and ink absorber."
